mmO₂ SECURES GROUPWIDE DEAL FOR ROLL-OUT OF BLACKBERRYReleased: 29 January 2002

mmO₂ and Research In Motion (RIM) announced today that they are extending their UK agreement, signed last year, to supply the BlackBerry™ wireless email solution throughout mmO₂'s European operating businesses. Following the recent announcement of mmO₂'s agreement with Handspring, this represents a further significant groupwide alliance.

BlackBerry is now commercially available in the UK, the Netherlands and Ireland. The solution is also being trialed by users in Germany. As a result of the latest agreement, corporate users will be able to immediately benefit from a full roaming capability across the mmO₂ footprint. During 2002, this capability will be extended to other territories where GPRS (2.5G) services can be accessed.

BlackBerry is a secure, end-to-end, integrated wireless email solution for mobile professionals which provides always-on access to corporate email accounts. mmO₂ is already delivering BlackBerry for Microsoft Exchange and will shortly offer BlackBerry for Lotus Notes. Among features unique to the BlackBerry solution are its single mailbox integration with the user's corporate email account, 'push' technology which ensures that emails are sent directly to the user's BlackBerry handheld without the need to dial in, and end-to-end high level Triple DES encryption. mmO₂ is the first to market a solution of this calibre in its four European territories.

In February 2001, BT Cellnet and RIM announced that BT Cellnet would distribute the BlackBerry solution over its GPRS data network in the UK. Following the launch in September, the company became the first European mobile operator to offer a true wireless email solution. In recent months, BT Cellnet has appointed a number of key resellers to augment the company's in-house team of experienced sales engineers.

Peter Erskine, chief executive officer of mmO₂, commented: "BlackBerry has been highly successful in North America and is a long-awaited mobile data application for our European customer-base. The initial response in the UK has been extremely encouraging. There has been 100 per cent take-up on trials and, in just three months since the device was launched into the market, we have signed up over 100 corporate customers. The extension of our partnership with RIM to include all of our operations is a key illustration of the strength the mmO₂ group brings through its ability to work together and reflects its leading position in the provision of mobile data to the business market."

Charles Meyer, director and vice president, RIM Europe, said: "Together, we have demonstrated the power and reliability of BlackBerry in the UK and we will build on that success to further BlackBerry's status as the premier wireless solution for corporate data. Through this agreement, we have substantially increased our distribution and market opportunity."
